Dolbey Launches Version 9 of Fusion Voice Dictation System

Concord, OH — September 18, 2006. Dolbey announces the public release of version 9 of the Fusion Voice Dictation System. Now available for new installations and upgrade for existing customers, this new software represents a significant advance in digital dictation. With compelling new features and a seamless migration path for existing users, Version 9 now brings together collaboration from end users and programming development.

Since the release of Fusion Voice version 8, this new version incorporates over 540 documented customer ideas for new functionality and features. "Our goal in this release was to build upon the stability of version 8 while enhancing the user experience with a feature-rich upgrade," states Robert Sintic, Chief Technology Officer of Dolbey's Voice Division. "Version 9 exemplifies our desire to listen and respond with new development that continues to grow the product's capabilities for a changing end-use environment," Mr. Sintic continued.

Major innovations include desktop integration to EMR and PACs applications. With this integration, physicians viewing a patient or image can seamlessly and quickly dictate a report without data entry. With version 9 of the popular Fusion Dictate application, now running on over 2,500 workstations, physicians can view, listen to, or edit prior dictations with the touch of a button.

Kris Wilson, President of Dolbey's Voice Division, states, "We have been very successful at implementing Fusion Voice into a variety of healthcare, legal and public safety applications. The features of this new version expand our marketability of the product while surpassing customer expectations. Enhancement requests from customers have been invaluable in this process."
